Mid-Weight FF&E Designer – Hospitality

Location: Shoreditch, London

Position: Full-Time, Studio-Based

Peter Mikic Studio is seeking a talented and detail-oriented Mid-Weight Hospitality FF&E Designer to join our Shoreditch studio.

Our hospitality portfolio spans high-end international environments including restaurants, hotels, branded residences, and retail spaces. This role offers the opportunity to contribute to prestigious global projects while working within a highly creative and collaborative studio environment.

We are looking for a proactive and organised designer with both a strong creative eye and technical precision. You will be comfortable managing responsibilities independently while collaborating closely with the wider design team, bringing a calm, solutions-focused mindset and excellent communication skills.

This is a long-term opportunity offering growth, responsibility, and exposure to exceptional hospitality projects worldwide.

The Role

As a Mid-Weight FF&E Designer, you will support the development and delivery of luxury hospitality interiors from concept through to installation. Working closely with the Director and Senior Designers, you will ensure all FF&E elements align with the studio's creative vision and meet the highest standards of quality and execution.

Responsibilities include:

- Collaborating with the design team to develop and execute FF&E concepts
- Preparing mood boards, material palettes, and client presentations
- Sourcing furniture, antiques, lighting, textiles, and artwork
- Designing bespoke FF&E including case goods, upholstery, rugs, and lighting
- Producing detailed specifications and FF&E schedules
- Coordinating with international suppliers, manufacturers, and contractors
- Tracking budgets and maintaining accurate FF&E documentation
- Supporting site installations and ensuring quality standards are met
- Maintaining knowledge of hospitality suppliers, materials, and emerging products
- Travelling internationally to project sites as required
